Qadhafi Denies Libyan Role in Airport Attacks

By Judith Miller
New York Times Service
TRIPOLI — Colonel Moammar Qadhafi, the Libyan leader, asserted Sunday that there were no Palestinian training camps in his country and that Libya had not been directly involved in last month's attacks on Palestinian terrorists at Rome and Vienna airports.

Col. Qadhafi, who was interviewed by U.S. television journalists while seated on a tractor parked under an olive tree, denied the airport raids in which 19 persons died and 111 were wounded.

Peres Says Israel Has No Intention Of Retaliating Alone Against Libya

Shimon Peres

By Thomas L. Friedman
New York Times Service
JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Shimon Peres said Sunday that Israel had no intention of attacking Libya on its own in retaliation for the Rome and Vienna airport massacres, and he called for "collective measures" against countries that harbor terrorists.

far we have managed to isolate him," he said. "To start fighting him head-on now would not be in our interest. We have too many other things to deal with closer to home."

A second and equally important constraint on the Israeli leadership is the nation's mood, for the Israeli public has not recovered from the trauma of the Lebanon war.

Israel political analysts say that for most Israelis, the idea of opening up a new conflict with Libya is particularly over the attacks in which only one Israeli was killed and seven wounded, is unacceptable.

Arafat Links Libya, Syria To Attacks

By Loren Jenkins
Washington Post Service
TUNIS — Yasser Arafat, the chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, has accused Syrian and Libyan intelligence agencies of being behind the wave of terrorism in the Mediterranean area in recent months.

Mr. Arafat, in an interview here said the intelligence services of Syria and Libya were sponsoring terrorism to discredit the PLO and to prevent a negotiated settlement with Israel.

Mr. Arafat's comments came against a backdrop of widespread allegations that the PLO was responsible for the attacks such as the ones at the Rome and Vienna airports last month.

Defence Minister Magnus Malm said that the government would act against the guerrillas. South Africa previously had denied alleged guerrilla activity in Botswana, Mozambique and Lesotho.

Hubert du Plessis, 35, and his daughter, 12, were killed when a truck in which they were riding hit the mine in a game park near the Limpopo river, Botswana said.

The mine killed the white driver, 40, and his 13-year-old son. The mine also killed a black farm worker.

In another incident, police said they shot dead a black man, 25, and his daughter, 12, in a township slum Saturday night, bringing the death toll in black political violence to at least 1,045 in 22 months.

General Malm said in a statement: "After deliberation, the government will act in order to fight this evil." The attack proved "that the South African government or other civilized South Africans could not negotiate or talk with the ANC."

Protesters under international pressure to talk to black leaders, including those of the communist, to halt nearly two years of political violence.

Scholarship Change Urged
The British trustees who administer the Rhodes Scholarships plan to ask the British government for permission to change a provision in the founder's will restricting two of the scholarships awarded to students from Africa to schools that admit only whites.

On Sunday, a spokesman for the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission in Washington said that Sequoyah had reported that the tank was overfilled. However, he said it would be premature to suspect overfilling as the cause of the leak.

The Sequoyah Fuels plant, in operation since 1970, performs uranium-conversion services for the nuclear power industry, said Donna McFarland, a spokeswoman for the plant.

Officials at Sequoyah's parent company, the Tennessee Valley Authority, said the plant was overfilled with uranium hexafluoride gas.

Mr. Peres said the tank was overfilled. However, he said it would be premature to suspect overfilling as the cause of the leak.

Mr. Peres's comments were echoed in Jerusalem by a senior official who declined to be identified.

The official said Israel had grown weary, and to some extent annoyed, with what appeared to be suggestions from Europe and the United States that Israel was "free to strike at the Libyans."

The senior official said that while Israel would consider being part of an international effort to deal with the regime of Colonel Moammar Qadhafi, it does not view a solo attack against Libya as in its interest, and the world should stop anticipating such an action.

Any retaliation the Americans might undertake against the Qadhafi regime would certainly be welcomed in Jerusalem, the official said.

The Israeli consensus about not retaliating militarily against Libya reflects a convergence of several factors, Israeli officials indicated.

To begin with, Israel does not want to make more of an enemy of Colonel Qadhafi, the officials said.

To open a new front with such a ruthless and unpredictable opponent at a time when Israel is preoccupied with the Syrians, the south Lebanese and the Palestinians, simply does not make sense, they said.

"Let us be frank," said one senior Israeli official. "This man Qadhafi is crazy. Do you think we want to be fighting with him all over Europe now?"

"The Europeans are afraid to deal with him," the official added.

The Americans are hesitant, but we are the ones who are invited to do after him.

U.S. Readies Force for Striking Back at Terrorists

By George C. Wilson and Michael Weisskopf
Washington Post Service
WASHINGTON — The United States has sent electronic warfare planes to the Mediterranean and alerted an aircraft carrier and a battleship in Norfolk, Virginia, that they might be needed to strengthen President Ronald Reagan's hand in dealing with Libya, according to administration officials.

Military sources said that the task force was suitable for striking a retaliatory blow for the terrorist attacks at the Rome and Vienna airports. They also said that it start bombing for waters off Libya. New sailing orders have not yet been issued, the officials said.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff have prepared a detailed analysis of what targets in Libya could be hit if the president should choose military action to retaliate for the Dec. 27 terrorist attacks.

Administration officials said Friday, however, that Mr. Reagan had not yet been briefed on the military options.

Mr. Reagan, in Mexico, Mexico, for a meeting with President Miguel de la Madrid, was asked if there was any truth to reports that the United States was planning a military response to Libya.

"I'm not aware of any doing anything out of the ordinary at all," Mr. Reagan said. "We've had various maneuvers and practices there going on."

Asked if he meant that no special buildup were under way, the president said: "No, you've got to stop listening to Qadhafi."

He was referring to Colonel Moammar Qadhafi, the Libyan leader.

The Joint Chiefs have ordered intensive planning for contingencies. The plans include sending a second carrier to the Mediterranean.

New Map Indicates Cosmos Is Composed of 'Bubbles'

By Walter Sullivan
New York Times Service
NEW YORK — A new three-dimensional map of the universe shows that it is composed of "bubbles," with all the stars and galaxies, probably including the Milky Way, gathered on the surfaces of the bubbles. This new view of the cosmos could require basic revisions in current theories regarding evolution of the universe, scientists say.

If the bubble structure is borne out by further mapping, they add, it could support a theory of the universe that, while it includes the forces of gravity, were the primary shapers of the cosmos.

The new survey, reaching out twice as far as previous ones, has shown a universe that, when viewed in two dimensions, appears to be made up of giant bubble-like voids with galaxies distributed on their surfaces.

"If we are right, these bubbles fill the universe just like soap bubbles filling the kitchen sink," said John P. Huchra of the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics in Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Most, if not all, stars are organized into clusters and superclusters, some of which, including the Milky Way to which our solar system belongs.

Because of the seemingly uniform expansion of the universe, the rate at which each galaxy or cluster of galaxies is receding from the Earth, as indicated by a shift of its light toward the red end of the spectrum, is used as a yardstick of distance.

The galaxies themselves are organized into clusters and superclusters, some of which, including the Milky Way to which our solar system belongs.

(FF169,000,000)

In the face of increased competition from both new and established publications, the International Herald Tribune can report all-time highs in both key indicators of a newspaper's health: circulation and advertising.

Circulation continued to grow at an unprecedented rate, and, for the full year 1985, reached 168,000. This represents an increase of 29% during the five-year period 1981-85.

Circulation gains have been both steady and evenly distributed between our European and Asian editions. In Europe, recent growth has been particularly significant: since early 1983, when the Wall Street Journal Europe entered the market, the IHT has added 15,300 copies, to reach a European circulation of 128,300.

Advertising Revenue grew to $ 32,625,000 in 1985 - a 34% increase over 1984. Total advertising space was up 1121 columns or 14%, with growth being shown in all major classifications, especially in the IHT's highly visible 4-color, which was up by 68%.

Results for the IHT Pacific edition (advertising appearing in the Hong Kong and Singapore press runs only) were even more dramatic: up 560 columns, or 48% - the fastest growth of any international publication in the Pacific area.

A record year for the IHT.

Automotive +	98 columns
Consumer products +	152 columns
Travel +	233 columns
Financial +	114 columns
Corporate/Industrial +	270 columns
Tobacco/Beverages +	149 columns
Classified +	119 columns
Supplements +	103 columns
4-color (incl. above) +	301 columns

This comes at a time when advertising investment in international media has shown only modest growth. Rome Report figures for the first nine months 1984/85 show an overall increase of 8% in the Atlantic area and 11% in the Pacific. Thus, relative to competing publications, the IHT's 1985 performance is particularly satisfying.

New Research. In 1985, Research Services Limited, London, undertook a major study of the business responsibilities, lifestyle and reading habits of frequent international business travelers, a group that is of prime importance, not only to marketers of travel-related products and services, but also to any company interested in reaching the truly international senior business executive. The full report of this survey is available from any IHT office.

Miami printing by satellite from Paris will start February 24, to permit distribution of the International Herald Tribune in Latin America and the Caribbean. It will also mean improved availability in major marketing and financial centers in the United States. This will be the eighth IHT facsimile printing site.
